and the other for one car. The single-car space is zoned for use as another bedroom or an office; Dolan says that all it needs is some carpeting and some plaster over the garage door. It's also hooked up to the central heating system. There is a side door to the outside.

The entryway of the house is enough to wow any visitor.

Your guests will be welcomed in suitably grand style by the curved wrought-iron of the staircase, the high exposed-beam ceiling and the mosaic compass rose in the floor. The top of the staircase even features an internal widow's walk that curves along the inside of the tower.

Kim Dolan loves dogs. "They are humans to me, but in furry coats," she says.

That is why she is going to donate $2,000 of the money she makes from the sale of her listing at 2150 Ravoli Drive in Oxnard to animal shelters and rescue organizations.

The money, which will be matched by the home's current owner, will be split among various local animal-welfare organizations, such as PetSmart's adoption program, the Humane Society and PAWS.

Dolan has been donating $1,000 from each of her checks to these and other organizations, and recently adopted a dog herself. Marley was being neglected and starved by her former owners when she was rescued.

She also has two other dogs, one of whom is something of a local celebrity in the harbor area. Honeybear the golden retriever goes with Dolan just about everywhere, often accompanying her on the electric boat she uses to show clients around the area.

Dolan says that when she retires from real estate, she is going to volunteer at a pet rescue.
